Dear Karen,

Hello from Australia. So happy to meet you at the website, Postcrossing. How do you think the weather is in Australia? Australia is big, and it is in the opposite hemisphere to Taiwan. So when it is in summer in Taiwan, it is winter in Australia.

Summer in the north of Australia is hot and humid. In the middle of Australia is hot and dry. It can be as hot as up to 50°C. In the south of Australia is also hot and dry, or humid if it is close to the beach.

Autumn in the south of Australia the leaves turn red and yellow. In the north, most trees are evergreen. In the south, the temperature starts to become cool.

Winter in northern Australia only gets down to 25°C, it is mostly sunny, and is the dry season. Winter in the middle, the temperature can go from -5°C at night to 24°C in the day. In the south of Australia gets to  $-3^{\circ}\text{C}$  at night but around  $15^{\circ}\text{C}$  in the day. Some mountains in southern Australia have snow, and you can even go skiing.

My friend, Shengjong, always said "Spring is the season of flowers in Australia." And crazy birds will attack you to protect their babies.

Hope you will visit Australia someday.

Best wishes,

Monique

Queen Elizabeth II died at her castle in Scotland at the age of 96. At Buckingham Palace in London, people began crying when they hear of her death. She had ruled England for 70 years. The Queen's health had been getting worse over the last few months, and she died peacefully. Her son, King Charles III, was very sad.

Queen Elizabeth had lived through interesting times as a ruler. She was queen during a lot of social change: from the end of the British Empire, the UK became a modern country and many things changed such as the television and the internet. She became a modern queen who would often talk to common people. She worked hard her whole life. Traveling was an important part of her job; the Queen travelled to 117 countries in 70 years. In fact, she traveled enough to make 42 journeys around the Earth.
