The sun is shining bright,
 The birds are singing with delight.
 The playground is full of kids who play,
 And the teachers watch, with a smile all day.

When it arrives,
 Everyone cheers,
 The shirts and shorts will dance,
 On the clothesline, they prance.

When it comes, Dad's face falls,
 The summer heat is just too much, he calls.
 Yet to me the trees and flowers wave,
 Like they're saying hi, with all they have.

Mrs. Smith's bread, delicious and freshly baked,
 A treat that all of us will never forget.
 But what sound is it? Oh no, it's from the room of Mr. Bleet's!
 A loud and scary voice, that used to make us want to retreat.

So on this special day of school,
 We have a lot of fun, and act like fools.
 But let's not forget, the lessons we've learned,
 And the memories we've made, that will forever be burned.

Here's the first half of Mr. Steward's worksheet for today's lesson.

In Brazil, you give a hug or a kiss when greeting a person. People always take off their shoes when entering someone's house. Besides, it is not polite to talk about business during social events or say something bad about the country. It's also rude to be late. Last but not least, never use left hand to pass things because it is thought to be unclean in Brazil. 	In Japan, when meeting people, you bow to show respect. It is also important to take off shoes when entering someone's house or a temple. When eating, remember not to pass food with chopsticks directly to someone's chopsticks. Don't be loud or talk on the phone on public transport like the bus or the train. Japanese people think tipping is rude, so don't do that after a meal or when you leave the hotel room.
 In Chile, greet people with a kiss on the cheek, even if you are meeting someone for the first time. Another important thing is to be on time. When dining, people will let women take their seats at the table first and they don't use their hands to touch food or talk with their mouth full. It is also impolite to ask someone about his job or how much money he makes during the first meeting.	 Koreans bow to show respect when they meet someone. Another thing to keep in mind is to leave your shoes outside when stepping into someone's house. People will wait for the oldest person to sit first before eating and you should not start eating before the elders. Doing things like blowing your nose in public and leaving chopsticks in the rice bowl will be considered rude too.
